

LILIENTHAL GREEN SCHOOLYARD

Bill McLeod

Besides providing a green educational environment to shape today's students into tomorrow's socially responsible citizens, this green schoolyard project seeks to engage neighbors as today's socially responsible citizens and to consider our public school as a community supported facility.

The project seeks to provide a green environment that will shape us, meaning the neighbors as well as the students. It will hopefully shape the minds and environments around the school to be more sustainable by providing lessons to the students and, through the students, examples for the neighborhood.

A successful project at Claire Lilienthal could be a prototype for neighborhood support of public schools around the City.
